

TJ O'Mara Wins Pessoa/US Hunter Seat Medal Final

T.J. O'Mara was in disbelief after taking top honors in the Pessoa/US Hunter Seat Medal Final, presented by Randolph College. The 17-year-old Rumson, NJ, resident moved up from fifth to first to win the coveted title. "I just can't believe it. Two years ago I got my first ribbon here and it meant the world to me," said O'Mara. "I am in shock right now. I never expected this to happen. My goal was just to be in the test, I would have been happy with a top four ribbon. I just can't believe it right now."

Annabel Revers of Weston, MA, jumped from 13th place after the first round to the runner-up spot and McKayla Langmeier, East Granby, CT, was third.

Following a preliminary round of 276 riders, the top 25 were called back for the second round, which was whittled down to an additional test for the top four. Revers placed fourth, Taylor St. Jacques was called back third, O'Mara was second and McKayla Langmeier of East Granby, CT, was the rider to beat. "I was hoping to land both leads on the counter canter, but that didn't work out for the first one so I had to do a simple change, which was fine," said Revers. "This was a really exciting day for me because coming here I was definitely not expecting to be second. I've never even gotten a ribbon at a major equestrian final. Today was really my day."

O'Mara turned in two flawless flying changes on Kaskade. "My mare is just incredible at doing flying changes," said O'Mara. "I was expecting her to land right at the first counter canter but when that didn't happen I had to switch gears and do the changes, focus on the next part of the test and completing the test."

Langmeier ran into a bit of trouble with her second change, which according to Judges Jimmy Torano and Marylisa Leffler, cost her the championship. "McKayla came in on top and even when she did the first simple change, she played it safe, which was a smart thing to do because she was winning the class," said Torano. "Then for one second she maybe let up and it cost her, but she still rode great."

O'Mara is trained by Stacia Madden and Max Amaya and will have his name added to the Adrian Van Sinderen Memorial Perpetual Trophy, not far from his sister Meg, who won the Medal Final in 2012.

Pennsylvania National HORSE SHOW
2017 Show Dates - October 12-21

From the edge-of-your-seat thrill of the jumper divisions to the rhythmic, graceful and flowing courses of the hunter and equitation divisions, the Pennsylvania National Horse Show has consistently managed to set the bar of equestrian competition to which other horse shows seek to meet.

The Doubleday Foundation was founded in 2003 by our very own co-manager Peter Doubleday. With total annual donations averaging $75,000, The Doubleday Foundation proudly supports many different organizations. Some of the events that benefit from the foundation include The Pennsylvania National Horse Show, Devon Horse Show and Country Fair, Ron & Danny's Rescue, the Show Jumping Hall of Fame, Pinecrest High School as well as various Humane Societies and Shelters in Moore County, NC.

"It gives me a great deal of pride to have something to give back to so many people, places, businesses and animal related concerns which have been good to me and my family throughout the years. It just makes me feel good to do good things for others" - Peter Doubleday

Vendor Spotlight

WINDLAND FARM

Nancy Baldwin of Windland Farm has been coming to the Pennsylvania National Horse show since she was just six years old. As a child she participated as both an exhibitor and a spectator.

For the past 26 years her involvement has been as a vendor. Nancy's amazing artwork is on display at her booth located on the Main Concourse near the entrance to the Terrace Tables.

You will find paintings, antiques, decorative boxes and more. Be sure to stop by and check out her display, you will surely find something you like.

"I love this show! It is very sentimental to me, I have such great memories here. I haven't missed a single show in sixty-four years."

- Nancy Baldwin
